

ABSTRACT

A connection tool to extract information from an electronic document source, for instance an XML source, such as an electronic marketplace, and convert it to a compatible format before providing it to an analytical application, such as a data warehouse system.